On December 7th, Mariya Milovidova, originally from Ukraine, hosted a spectacular Art & Fashion Birthday Showcase at Artitude Gallery in San Francisco, bringing together influential guests, fashion lovers, philanthropists, and members of the Bay Area cultural scene. The evening featured a red-carpet reception, live music, couture runway presentations, and Mariya's signature live-painting performance—this time elevated by a breathtaking opera performance from 14-year-old prodigy Alliana Lili Yang, who is scheduled to perform at Carnegie Hall next year. As Alliana sang, Mariya painted simultaneously on a life-size canvas and on a model's dress, creating a once-in-a-lifetime fusion of fashion, fine art, and classical music. One of the unforgettable highlights of the evening came when California State Treasurer Fiona Ma honored Mariya with a special award recognizing her artistic contribution and cultural impact in the community.

What people talked about the next day was the magic of that combined moment—Alliana's soaring voice filling the gallery as Mariya switched effortlessly between painting with her left and right hands. Guests described it as "cinematic," "spellbinding," and "the moment the entire room went silent." Others spoke about the couture pieces, the high-profile attendees, the delectable hors d'oeuvres provided by Victoriya Pevzner of Ask A Spoon and the emotional moment when Mariya received her award. The night left everyone inspired, energized, and eager for her next groundbreaking showcase.
